

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In the home medical examination system, a medical center terminal receives home medical examination request information from a user terminal and a doctor creates a medical examination chart through interactive communication with the user terminal based on the home medical examination request information. The medical center terminal transmits medical examination chart information to a pharmacy terminal and the user terminal through the Internet. The pharmacy terminal compounds a medicine based on prescription information in the medical examination chart information from the medical center terminal and prepares medical equipment and delivers them to a sick person. The pharmacy terminal transmits medicine delivery information to the user terminal and the medical center terminal through the Internet.